

Introducing
Angela Battle
Sellen's Director of Subcontractor Diversity and Development

In November 2017, Angela Battle joined our team to lead Sellen's subcontractor diversity and development program. In this role, Angela will work with Sellen project teams to lead outreach efforts and educational programs that provide maximum opportunities for small, local and diverse subcontractors and consultants to participate in Sellen's contracting process. Many of you will start seeing Angela at industry tradeshows and project meetings, so we thought we'd take this opportunity to introduce her.

Q: What are your goals for Sellen's diversity and development program?

A: Subcontractor diversity is a clear priority for Sellen, and we want to ensure this priority is supported through Sellen's training, policy and inclusion plans. I want to work collaboratively with the local subcontractor community to build relationships and ensure that our project teams reflect the diversity of our communities.

Q: Why is it important to build Sellen's diversity program?

A: At Sellen, we want to proactively engage and support diverse subcontractors to create a welcoming environment that reflects diversity, promotes opportunity and values inclusion. As the largest builder in the Puget Sound region, it is important for Sellen to build a robust program to contribute more directly to the growth and improvement of diverse businesses.

Q: How would you describe yourself to others?

A: I'm honest, hardworking, empathetic and always willing to go the extra mile to help underrepresented businesses. Outside of work, I enjoy spending time with my family, gardening and traveling to warm, sunny places.
